KAREN STEIN

WEST UNION, Ohio | Looks can be deceiving and even intimidating, especially when you are 125 pounds of fur and teeth. But to hundreds of his closest friends in Adams County, Leroy is a gentle giant whose mission is to help brighten the day of children and the elderly. Leroy began his career as a therapy dog when he was 18 months old. Now 4, he is a patient and laid-back great Pyrenees dog that stands almost a yard tall from his feet to the top of his head. He is more than a yard long, and with 4-inch fluffy white fur, he creates a massive presence in any room. Across the nation, the popularity of therapy dogs is increasing. Certainly, Leroy's popularity is on the uptick. When he enters a room, he is greeted with smiles, hugs, some "Wows" and the occasional "Oh my, is that a dog?" and friends greet him with immediate pets and even hugs. Don See, a nursing student visiting the Manor said, "I know what my dog means to me. It seems to bring people here out of their shells. He just make you feel good." Leroy has been visiting the Manor nursing home and has been the star at the children's reading program at the Peebles branch of the Adams County Public Library for more than two years. "He brings smiles everywhere he goes. I think it is very rewarding and I get to show off my dog ... he is so special and he is just awesome," said his owner, Sherri Perkins.

Senate begins debate on casino gambling proposal

ROGER ALFORD
Associated Press

FRANKFORT | The Senate voted down a proposal Thursday to change the state Constitution to legalize casinos in Kentucky, ending months of debate on what had become a divisive issue in the Bible-belt state. Despite the long history of wagering on horses, Kentucky has never allowed casinos. And many lawmakers were reluctant to change that, knowing they may face disapproving constituents in upcoming legislative elections. The Senate voted 21-16 against the proposal that would have allowed Kentucky to join several neighboring states that already have casinos. "I don't care what the other states are doing," said Sen. Alice Forgy Kerr, R-Lexington. "Why would we jump off this cliff into darkness and sin and addiction? This is terrible public policy."

COMPANY FAILING TO COMPLY WITH LAW

Every time a mortgage changes hands in Kentucky, the transaction is to be registered at the county clerk's office and a fee is to be paid. On Thursday, Mason County joined with several other counties, including Franklin and Warren counties, across the state in a class action lawsuit against a mortgage registration company which has failed to comply with the law, which is regulated under KRS 382.110(1). Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, also known as MERS, is comprised of shareholders of some of the largest mortgage lending institutions in the nation. Its shareholders list includes Bank of America, Wells Fargo, Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac, GMAC Residential Funding Corp, CitiMortgage, First American Title Insurance Corp., Guaranty Bank and HSBC Finance Corp. among others. Its mission statement is to register every mortgage loan in the United State on the MERS system; it was created by the mortgage banking industry to streamline the mortgage process by using electronic commerce; act as "nominee" in county land records for the lender and servicer; any loan registered on the MERS system is inoculated against future assignments; and MERS remains the mortgagee no matter how many times servicing is traded. Kinniconick goes under study

NEW FEDERAL GRANT TO ANALYZE SEDIMENT

marla.toncra@lee.net

FRANKFORT | Kinniconick Creek in Lewis County has gotten a lot of attention lately. Last week it was announced that Lewis County Fiscal Court was the beneficiary of a federal grant to enhance recreational activities on the creek. This week, a second grant has been announced by the Kentucky Energy and Environment Cabinet in the amount of $571,468 to study the affects of sediment and its impact to habitat along the 99-mile creek. The Kentucky State Nature Preserves Commission was awarded a $342,881 federal grant to develop a sediment-focused watershed plan and stream restoration design for Kinniconick. Northern Kentucky University Center for Applied Ecology will supply the $228,587 non-federal match for the study. The funds are part of the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency's Clean Water Act Section 319(h) nonpoint source pollution control grants for the development of watershed management plans and implementation of nonpoint source pollution controls. Kinniconick provides habitat for one federally endangered species, Virginia spiraea, and several state-listed species. According to officials in Frankfort, current land practices in and around the project area have led to degradation through increased sedimentation and bank erosion. The increased sediment causes cloudiness in the water and makes it difficult for sight-feeding fish and invertebrate species to catch food, hide from predators and reproduce.

Sen. Damon Thayer, R-Georgetown, kicked off debate on the divisive issue Thursday afternoon by repeating a long-used argument that Kentucky's horse racing industry needs the revenue casinos could produce to compete with other states.

If lawmakers had approved Thayer's proposal, it would have been placed on the November ballot for voters to ratify or reject. "I trust the people," Thayer said.

Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville opened the Senate on Thursday with a prayer in which he called for "due respect for virtue and religion." Kurtz opposed the initiative, saying he is concerned about the effects gambling would have on the community.

"There are many of us here from a conscience standpoint that cannot vote for this, because we are not agreed," said Sen. Mike Wilson, R-Bowling Green. "We don't believe that you should enshrine in the Constitution of the state of Kentucky casino gambling — forever constitutionally protected and we will never be rid of it."

Similar proposals to legalize casino-style gambling have been bandied about in Kentucky for two decades, but have never won favor in the General Assembly.

"We've dealt with this far too long," Sen. R.J. Palmer Jr., D-Winchester told his colleagues in pressing for the proposal. "Let the people of this state have their final say."

Gov. Steve Beshear has been pushing for more gambling opportunities in Kentucky in hopes that it would generate more revenue for the horse industry and for state government coffers.

Beshear said Kentucky could collect $266 million in one-time license fees by allowing casinos to open. Taxing them, he said, could generate an additional $377 million a year in revenue for government programs and services.

To appease reluctant lawmakers, Thayer amended his proposal so that it no longer requires up to five of the proposed casinos to be built at race tracks. New language allows up to seven casinos in the state with no assurance that they would be built at horse tracks.

Beshear had made a personal appeal to a Senate committee on Wednesday, repeating arguments he has been making for five years to approve the constitutional amendment.

Beshear said Kentucky is now losing hundreds of millions of dollars a year to neighboring states that already have casinos. He said Kentucky needs to legalize casinos so that that money can be kept in the state.

"This would be detrimental to so many Kentucky families," said Sen. Ray Jones, D-Pikeville. "I do not believe that the expansion of gambling in Kentucky is the right moral choice, nor is it sound public policy."

The legislation is Senate Bill 151.

MISCONNECTION

The connective tissue disorder known as "Marfan syndrome" is an inheritable condition that affects about one in every 5,000 Americans. Due to a mutation in the gene that controls how the body produces fibrillin (a protein that plays a primary role in the body's connective tissue), many parts of the body may be affected. While the most serious complications of Marfan syndrome involve the heart and blood vessels, the ophthalmologist is primarily concerned with the syndrome's effect on the eyes. The most common of these is a dislocated lens in one or both eyes, in which the lens shifts up, down, or to the side. As one might expect, any shift in this important component must be addressed.

Most people who have Marfan syndrome inherited it from their parents. Our mission is to provide the highest quality, comprehensive care for you and your eyes in a relaxed and friendly manner. We take the time to answer your questions and provide information to help you understand your condition and options for treatment. At KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE, we encourage our patients to have regular eye examinations because many eye problems develop without obvious symptoms and are not noticed by the patient until damage has occurred. She and Leroy listen to children reading every other Wednesday at the Peebles branch for more than hour. In a private corner, the library has set up a space for the program where children can confidently read to the dog.

"He seems to calm people and children . . . sometimes he falls asleep while they are reading," Perkins said. She listens quietly too, unless a child looks up for advice on a difficult word.

Other times, Leroy has his head right beside the child's and almost seems to be understanding every word. That was the way it was Wednesday when Kenny Rogers IV, 7, of Peebles, was reading to him. He has been coming to read to Leroy since he was 4.

Emma Stanhope, 7, is home schooled by her grandparents, Dennis and Karen Stanhope.

"I love coming here and reading. He listens to me read. I like that . . . and he is so pretty," Emma Stanhope said. Her grandfather said Emma is reading at a third-grade level.

A study held by the Cummings School of Veterinary Medicine at Tufts University, Mass., at local libraries showed how children who practiced reading to the dogs stuck with the program more than those reading to people, but they are still investigating if the children's reading improved.

However, in Adams County there has been a very successful student as a result of the library reading program. He began reading to Leroy when he was in third grade.

Leroy has been listening to children read for more than two years at the Peebles branch of the Adams County Public Library. Alyssa Young, 9, is reading the "Wizard of Oz" to Leroy on Wednesday afternoon, as part of the Reading Program with Leroy.

His grandmother, Shirley Pell, first heard of therapy dogs while vacationing in the Myrtle Beach, N.C.

"I saw a program about the dogs on television and thought that might help my grandson with autism but he just wasn't ready for Leroy at that time. But Jacob is the success story. He wasn't doing very well at all in reading while in third grade. And worse, he didn't want to read. I had been so worried. I knew if he didn't like to read he wasn't going to do well. But now he is getting all A's and B's in fifth grade," she said.

Pell found Perkins while surfing online and arranged for her to talk to the Adams County Library Director Harold Showalter.

"Everything fell in place then. Jacob went every week for about eight weeks. His grandfather and I were really excited the day he asked for a book while we were in Walmart. Now he likes to read," Pell said.

"Reading to the dog was better than reading to somebody. I'd rather talk to the dog. He doesn't tell you if you make a mistake," Jacob said.

"I think this was the best thing that ever happened to the reading program in Adams County," Pell said, who was the director of the West Union Public Library for 16 years. She retired in 2004.

Her husband, Robert Pell said, "When it comes to grandmothers, there is no stopping them when they are on a mission to help their grandchildren."

"I think my other grandson might be ready to meet with Leroy now. He loved the dog, and he is getting more sociable now," Shirley Pell said.

Sherry Thompson, Peebles library program coordinator, said, "It just gives me shivers when I think about Jacob's success at overcoming his reading problems by reading to Leroy. This program has been so successful. The children just love it."

Leroy reads every other Wednesday at the Peebles Library beginning at 3:30 p.m. Parents can reserve a time by calling 937-587-2085 or visit online at www.adamsco.lib.oh.us.

Jim Roe, with the Kentucky Division of Water said the study should get underway in late spring or early summer and will take two to three years to complete. Partners in the study are the University of Louisville Research Foundation, a landowner in the Kinniconick project area, USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service and NKU Center for Ecology.

Row and Brent Frazier with KSNPC said the creek stream will be monitored to assess the factors creating the sediment, whether it's new erosion or existing sediment that is causing the problems.

Frazier said the issue could be man-made problems that have changed the behavior of watersheds into Kinniconick and the study will determine how to mitigate the damage.

KSNPC Director Don Dott Jr. said he hopes to use the project to demonstrate to other landowners in the watershed the value of conservation measures.

HB216 COULD BRING MORE TO MANY

wendy.mitchell@lee.net

On Feb. 16, a proposal to raise Kentucky's school dropout age from 16 to 18 within the next five years, House Bill 216, was passed by the House by an 87-10 vote.

Sponsored by Rep. Jeff Greer and Rep. Reginald Meeks, HB216 now goes to the Senate for its consideration.

Mason County School Superintendent Tim Moore has been in meetings in Frankfort as the bill has been discussed.

"No one can logically say staying in school is not a good thing to do," Moore said Thursday.

If the bill becomes law, the dropout age would change to age 18 in 2017 after being gradually increased from age 16 to 17 on July 1, 2016 and age 17 to 18 on July 1, 2017.

The class of 2012 freshman class would be the first students affected by the legislation, officials said.

According to Greer, high school dropouts earn approximately $7,800 less a year and approximately $327,000 less over a lifetime than high school graduates.

Greer also said that 75 percent of inmates in Kentucky prisons are school dropouts.

Moore said he would like to see options included in the changes, so students do not get to the point they want to drop out.

"We need to expand vocational technical opportunities for more kids at an earlier age. Everybody has a talent that makes them special and we have to have opportunities for students to excel at what they do the best," Moore said. "To do that we have to have options; that costs money. If I was a legislator I would need to explain my 'yes' vote."

"It is absolutely critical; we have to find ways to work with courts, schools and families to instill the expectation that going to school is a good thing."

State battle could complicate county precinct mapping

wendy.mitchell@lee.net

BROOKSVILLE | With future Kentucky House and Senate district lines unclear without a score card, a new potential problem has emerged from the state battle over redistricting.

In the summer of 2011 each county was mandated to file a redistricting plan with the state in order to comply with regulations requiring each voting precinct to contain the same amount of constituents, within 5 percent either side of equal.

Meetings were held, maps were worked, and reworked, and decisions were made in each county, based on the 2010 U.S. Census data for that county.

Once completed, each map was submitted for approval by officials in Frankfort.

Usually the state is done first, Bracken County Attorney Mike Clark said.

But legal wrangling in Frankfort has led to a tenuous situation for every county, he said.

Attorney in Big Rivers bankruptcy reprimanded

BRETT BARROUQUERE
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE | The Kentucky Supreme Court on Thursday publicly reprimanded an attorney involved in the massive bankruptcy of Big Rivers Electric Corp., for his handling of fees and contact with creditors during the case.

The high court found that J. Baxter Schilling of Louisville improperly sought fees from several of the utility co-op's largest creditors while portraying himself as a disinterested examiner to the bankruptcy court.

The court appointed Schilling as examiner for Big Rivers in 1996, giving him the role of helping the electric company and its creditors arrive at a consensual plan of reorganization. The company couldn't meet financial obligations on $1.2 billion in debt.

The company emerged from bankruptcy in 1997, about a year after initially filing.

Ky. attorney suspended

BRETT BARROUQUERE

LOUISVILLE | A northern Kentucky attorney who has a combative history with the Kentucky Bar Association was suspended for 61 days and ordered to attend ethics training for what the state Supreme Court found to be ethical violations.

The high court on Thursday also ordered Eric Deters, of Independence, to pay $1,834 for the cost of the bar association's proceedings against him.

The suspension stems from Deters' actions in multiple cases, including one involving attorney's fees and another that deals with comments made about a judge and opposing counsel.

Deters, who doubles as a radio talk-show host on WLW-AM in Cincinnati, said the decision on "technical violations" is wrong and that he didn't get a fair hearing.

"For it to be a 7-0 decision really shocked me," Deters told The Associated Press. "Are you kidding me?"

The high court took issue with Deters making calls to the ex-husband of a client, who was watching over a child at the hospital. Chief Justice John D.

HOLIDAY WORLD OPERATOR TO REOPEN KENTUCKY PARK

LOUISVILLE | A new lease has been approved for the former Kentucky Kingdom amusement park.

The Kentucky Fair Board unanimously agreed Thursday to lease the park to the Koch family, which operates Holiday World theme park in Santa Claus, Ind. Base rent for the 50-year lease will be $400,000 beginning in 2013, increasing until 2016 when it becomes $1 million annually, The Courier-Journal reported.

The park, which closed two years ago amid bankruptcy proceedings, will be renamed Bluegrass Boardwalk and is expected to reopen in May 2013, employing 25 people full-time and 800 seasonal workers, WAVE-TV reported.

He did not want to see options come at the expense of other programs which give opportunities in a different realm. “Every program is important to different people in a different way,” Moore said. Funding should be part of the plan in the same way the 1990 Kentucky Education Reform Act had funding to make it work, Moore said. “We’ve come a long way since KERA , but this is the last piece of the puzzle I think we need...,” Greer said. Some lawmakers questioned whether increasing Kentucky’s compulsory school attendance age was the best way to improve education, while others commented on the pitfalls of keeping students in a classroom if they want to drop out of school. “It is absolutely critical; we have to find ways to work with courts, schools and families to instill the expectation that going to school is a good thing,” Moore said. “The main piece is that we need families to know that getting into the habit of going to school gives them great chances at success and costs hardly anything. It is not on the kids, it is on the adults to know there is no excuse for not being at school.” The Kentucky Education Cabinet already has plans to develop regulations that lead those students through appropriate alternative education programs, Greer said. Generations of educational apathy can be overcome, Moore said. “We can do so much for a student if we can just get them to school,” Moore said.

Moore would like students and families to understand that vocational school is not the same as it was in generations past, so every student can graduate high school with a diploma. “In the past, the perception was it was for the “can’t do” student, but it has become a place where any number of programs can lead students into jobs and careers where they could be the business owner who is hiring the college graduate,” Moore said. “There are mechanical, technical, and medical options already in place.”

MAPPING

Months after being submitted, maps are still not approved, and may face more changes, officials said. “If the (state) redistricting changes, we may be forced to do all that over again,” said Bracken County Clerk RaeJean Poe, who only recently learned Frankfort officials wanted more details about precinct lines placed on the Bracken County map, including a reference to show where the Ohio River was located and a bigger map of Augusta. “Anyone visiting Augusta and going north on Elizabeth Street is going to find (the Ohio River) easy enough,” said Bracken County Attorney Mike Clark.

Part of the potential problem would be if a county was split by a House or Senate district, as in the proposal to split Lewis County into three districts. New precincts would have to be created on the county level and new maps for each division created, officials said. “None of the precincts can overlap,” Poe said. Bracken officials said on Wednesday, they hoped such a change would not happen there, but nothing is guaranteed until the state process was completed. The potential waste of time and resources concerns Poe. “We put a lot of time and effort into getting what we were suppose to do done on time,” Poe said. “I hope we don’t have to do it over.”

Minton said Deters solicited the ex-husband’s business and offered to file suit over the accident resulting in the child’s hospitalization. The ex-husband declined, but Deters kept calling, and eventually filed documents on behalf of his client and her ex-husband, Minton found. Deters said it was a simple mistake. In a separate case, Minton wrote, Deters took at $1,500 fee from clients to represent them in a harassment and property line dispute. Deters withdrew from the case less than two months later, but didn’t refund any of the money. The high court also found problems with Deters in a January 2008 case in which he accused Grant County Circuit Court Judge Stephen Bates and opposing counsel, Ruth Baxter, of improperly discussing a civil case without him present, resulting in Baxter winning the case. Deters then went on his radio show and made similar allegations. Minton and the other justices found that Deters, despite his denials, had publicly made disparaging comments about Bates and Baxter. “Specifically, Deters alleged that Judge Bates knew he had contributed money to the judge’s opponent in previous elections and therefore ruled against him,” Minton wrote. Deters sued the Kentucky Bar Association in 2011 over its handling of the investigations into complaints involving Bates and the case involving his client and her ex-husband. U.S. District Judge Danny C. Reeves turned away Deters’ lawsuit, which is now with the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. The case is something of a victory for Deters, though. A bar trial commissioner initially found Deters guilty of 16 counts and recommended a six month suspension. The high court acted only on four charges. Deters noted that part of his suspension is based on a refusal to admit to unethical conduct. “How can I get punished for not admitting I’m wrong when ... I’m found innocent?” Deters said. Deters, who is also licensed to practice in Ohio, said he will return to legal practice in Kentucky after the suspension ends. Chris Davey, a spokesman for the Ohio Supreme Court, said an attorney licensed in that state has 30 days to notify the high court of any disciplinary action in another state. Then, the attorney has 20 days to show why he should not face the same or a similar punishment in Ohio. Deters, though, plans to keep practicing law. “I’ve got to put this in perspective,” Deters said. “I didn’t lose any clients. My clients love me the way I am. I’m going to serve my time and move on.”

BANKRUPT

FROM A3

The reprimands do not affect Schilling’s ability to practice law. Schilling’s attorney, Peter Ostermiller of Louisville, said his client is disappointed in some of the technical aspects of the court’s ruling that didn’t allow the justices to consider testimony from three bankruptcy judges who found his work to be ethical. Baxter is pleased that the Supreme Court recognized that he had devoted a substantial amount of time to the Big Rivers case, and that there was a very successful outcome as a result of his efforts,” Ostermiller said. “Baxter has never believed that he acted inappropriately before the Bankruptcy Judges whom he appeared.” Examiners appointed in bankruptcy cases investigate the details of the company that sought protection and reorganization in federal court. In some cases, the examiner may negotiate or help the parties negotiate a settlement. That was partially Schilling’s role with Big Rivers, which serves 112,000 member-consumers in 22 western Kentucky counties. Big Rivers owed $1.1 billion of its debt to the Rural Utilities Service of the United States Department of Agriculture, which held an interest in all of Big Rivers’ assets. Chase, Bank of New York and Mapco were three of the largest unsecured creditors of the utility. “The Big Rivers case was one of the largest, if not the largest, bankruptcy cases ever filed in Kentucky,” Chief Justice John D. Minton wrote for the court. Schilling met with the creditors in Washington, D.C., in 1996 in an attempt to negotiate an agreed reorganization plan. After that attempt falters, Schilling tried to reach a fee agreement with Chase, Bank of New York and Mapco. But, Schilling did not disclose that attempt to the bankruptcy court when asking the judge to award him fees. Schilling later disclosed a fee deal with the creditors, prompting Rural Utilities Service, another large creditor, and the bankruptcy trustee to question what other deals Schilling had reached. RUS and the trustee also asked that Schilling be required to give up all the fees received during the case. Schilling then denied reaching an agreement with Mapco, but the company produced letters Schilling had sent insisting a fee agreement had been reached. Bank of New York took a similar step. In 1998, Schilling submitted his final fee application to the court seeking $4.41 million. The bankruptcy trustee asked a judge to force Schilling to give up all the funds he had received because of the improper side agreements with the creditors. Bankruptcy Judge David T. Stosberg eventually awarded Schilling a fee of a little over $2.6 million, but the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decision. The appeals court found Schilling violated his duty to remain a disinterested party by entering into oral agreements for fees with creditors. The appeals court described Schilling’s behavior as “secretive and deceptive” and ordered him to return all the fees.

LAWSUIT

to join in the class action law suit, which could net the county an estimated $130,000 in recording fees.

Estill said he expects the law suit to be filed within the next few days and if successful, it could stop the practice of mortgage serving agents failing to register the trade and it would also make it easier for property owners to find mortgage records. Estill said it isn't unusual for property closings to be delayed because it is unclear who the mortgage holder is.

By approving the resolution to join the class action suit, the county has also entered into an agreement to engage the legal services of Spurgeon and Tinker, PSC, the Hon. Gregory D. Stumbo, the Bolog Firm, and Whiteford, Taylor and Preston, LLC to represent Mason County Fiscal Court and/or its elected officials in the case against MERS.

Estill said citizens who have mortgages with any of the MERS shareholder companies are not liable for the transaction fees that haven't been paid to the county. It is estimated there are 3,300 mortgages in Mason County affected by the law suit.

Across the state, MERS has been named as a nominee in at least 825,000 Kentucky mortgages.

The firm consistently has earned high marks as an employer of choice in other national rankings. For the 13th year, Edward Jones was named one of FORTUNE magazine's "100 Best Companies to Work For 2012." The firm took the No. 5 overall spot in the ranking and also was named to the No. 3 spot for large companies.

For 2012, Edward Jones was the top-ranked national brokerage on the list and won special recognition for its financial advisor training, which enrolls nearly 200 trainees monthly. Edward Jones' Practice Makes Perfect initiative — which significantly increased role play in training programs for recruits from all walks of life, improving their success rates — won one of five Best Practice awards.

The 2012 rankings and special recognitions were announced at a Feb. 13 awards dinner during the magazine's Training 2012 Conference and Expo in Atlanta, Ga.

DOW FLIRTS WITH 13,000 AGAIN BUT CAN'T MAKE IT

NEW YORK | The Dow Jones industrial average made another run at 13,000 but couldn't quite get there.

Stocks recovered from an early loss Thursday and pushed the Dow within four points of the milestone. Investors were encouraged by more good news on U.S. jobs, but gains were limited by poor results from retailers such as Safeway and Kohl's.

The Dow finished up 46.02 points at 12,984.69. The Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 5.80 points to close at 1,363.46. The Nasdaq composite index climbed 23.81 points to 2,956.98.

The Dow pierced 13,000 three times Tuesday but could not hold the milestone. The average hasn't closed above 13,000 since May 19, 2008, four months before the financial crisis.

Investors were encouraged Thursday after the government reported that the number of people seeking unemployment benefits last week was unchanged. The four-week average was the lowest in four years.

High unemployment has been a problem for retailers, which have been forced to slash prices even though they are paying more to make and ship their goods. The burden showed in Thursday's earnings reports.

Kohl's, the department store chain, sank 6 percent after weak holiday sales caused it to miss Wall Street estimates for revenue and earnings. Grocery store chain Safeway Inc. plunged more than 7 percent after reporting a 6 percent drop in profit.

Part of the problem is the rising cost of gas, which could hurt the economic recovery. The price of gas is rising as tensions mount over Iran's nuclear program. A gallon of regular sells for $3.61 on average, the highest on record this time of year.

The price of oil jumped again Thursday, to $107.83, a nine-month high and up $1.52 for the day. Beside's Iran, analysts blamed the falling U.S. dollar, which makes oil more expensive for investors holding foreign money.

The euro jumped to a two-month high against the dollar, $1.337, up almost a penny from Wednesday, after business confidence surged in Germany. — AP

Benchmark oil price hits a 9-month high, near $108

CHRIS KAHN
Associated Press

NEW YORK | Oil prices hit a new nine-month high Thursday as the dollar fell and gas pump prices climbed closer to $4 a gallon across much of the country.

Benchmark crude prices rose by $1.55 to end the day at $107.83 per barrel in New York. That's the highest price since May 4 of last year. Brent crude increased by 72 cents to finish at $123.62 per barrel in London.

The rise in oil prices has helped push retail gasoline prices to record levels for this time of year. Benchmark crude has increased 9 percent so far in 2012, and gas pump prices are up about 5 percent.

Retail gasoline prices added another 3 cents Thursday for a national average of $3.61 a gallon, according to AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. A gallon of regular has already topped $4 in California, Hawaii and Alaska. Gasoline is nearly $3.90 per gallon in New York and Connecticut. Analysts think we could see a national average of $4.25 a gallon by April.

The ongoing tension between western nations and Iran is continuing to drive oil prices higher.

Iran, the world's third-biggest oil exporter, already has cut off shipments to Britain and France, and it may halt exports to other European countries. Iran also has threatened to close the Strait of Hormuz, a crucial waterway in the Persian Gulf through which one-sixth of the world's seaborne exports flow every day.

Experts doubt Iran will try to dramatically cut shipments, given its dependence on oil sales. About half of the country's revenue comes from crude. But many investors are snapping up oil contracts in case tensions escalate further.

"The Iranian influence remains as a major driver" in oil prices, independent analyst and trader Jim Ritterbusch said.

In addition to an oil embargo set to start this summer, European Union leaders said Thursday that the EU is preparing regulations that will put further financial pressure on Iran by keeping its banks from using a major financial clearinghouse.

Oil prices got an extra boost Thursday afternoon as the dollar fell against the euro and other major currencies. Oil is priced in U.S. currency and tends to rise as the dollar falls and makes crude cheaper for investors with foreign money.

Oil prices are higher even though U.S. petroleum demand has been tanking compared to a year ago. The Energy Information Administration said Thursday that demand has dropped 6.7 percent for oil, and 6.1 percent for gasoline. The U.S. remains the world's biggest oil consumer, but government data show that demand is growing the most overseas in developing countries like China.

Meanwhile, the price of natural gas fell after the government said supplies remain significantly higher than average for this time of year. Natural gas futures on Thursday fell by 2 cents to finish at $2.62 per 1,000 cubic feet in New York.

A boom in North American shale drilling has filled underground storage facilities across the country. The Energy Information Administration says supplies are more than 40 percent higher than the five-year average.

Major natural gas producers recently cut back on production, as prices linger around a 10-year low. But analysts say they're not doing enough to reduce the glut.

BROOKSVILLE | Mason County picked up its 12th consecutive boys 39th District title Thursday night but Augusta cemented its standing as a 10th Region competitor. The Panthers were looking to end a 30-year drought of district titles and get their first-ever win over the favored Royals — and they almost did. Augusta trailed most of the game and missed a go-ahead shot at the buzzer to fall 72-71 to Mason County. “We had the last shot and there’s nothing more you can ask for,” Augusta coach Jason Hinson said. Regaining possession of the basketball with 23 seconds to go and trailing by one, Augusta took the ball down the court under heavy pressure from Mason County. Augusta’s Brent Bach had a jump shot blocked by Steven Chambers but Jameel Hala-wani scrambled for the rebound and passed to Tanner Kelsch. Kelsch also missed his opportunity but Bach got the rebound and went for the final shot as time ticked away. “It was up there soft and just rolled around,” Mason County coach Chris O’Hearn said, commenting he thought the shot was good. The ball rolled around the rim and fell off as the final buzzer sounded. “When you’ve got your money man taking the last shot, you can’t ask for anything more than that,” Hinson said of Bach.

Bach finished with a game-high 27 points. “I don’t think very many people gave us a chance (of winning the district),” Hinson said. But Hinson was optimistic about the upcoming 10th Region Tournament. “Saturday, when somebody draws the orange, they’ll know they have their work cut out for them.” O’Hearn was also impressed with Augusta’s effort. “It was a hard-fought game,” he said. “I just had that feeling all along that they were just going to get that one big shot.”

Third time proves to be charm for Lady Panthers

FLEMING COMES BACK FROM 21-3 DEFICIT

BRAD LAUX
For The Ledger Independent

OWINGSVILLE | Fleming County trailed 21-3 to archrival Rowan County at the end of the first quarter of Thursday’s 61st District Girls’ Basketball Tournament championship game, but no one on the Lady Panther bench panicked. In fact, coach Kristy Orem did not even call a time-out while her team was getting out-scored 15-0 during the final five minutes and 40 seconds of the period. Why not? “I knew (we could win) the whole time. I what we were going to do the whole game, and every quarter we talked about (our plan),” she said. “I just didn’t expect them to hit 9-of-11 shots in the first quarter, but we just wanted to be within 10 by halftime and I knew we’d be all right.” Halftime score: Rowan County 31, Fleming County 20. The prognostication proved to be correct (except the 10-point deficit part), as Fleming County rallied to win 53-49 and retake the crown from the Lady Vikings.

The Lady Panthers confidence was well placed, but it was not just Orem who believed her team would come out with their second district tournament title in the last three years. “At halftime we knew that if we had cut the lead down by 10 that we could win,” said tournament MVP and Fleming County senior Robbie Allex. “We talked about it in (the locker room).”

FITE: ‘IT HASN’T SUNK IN’

GREENUP | After a devastating one-point loss in the 63rd District finals last year, Lewis County made its mission to not only get back this year but hang a championship banner in the gym. Thursday night, the Lady Lions got it. With the game never in either team’s clear favor the entire time, Lewis County (19-11) got in the bonus midway through the fourth quarter and freshman guard Emily Frye went perfect at the line to give the Lady Lions their first district title ever with a 52-44 win over Raceland. “It hasn’t sunk in,” Lewis County coach Jay Fite said after cutting down the nets. “These girls earned it. I told them we weren’t on a mission when this tournament started, we’ve been on a mission since last February.” The two teams entered the fourth quarter tied at 30 and to that point, the lead had changed hands 10 times and three points was the largest lead either team held. The same continued through the first half of the final frame but with 4:37 left, Tori Liles got fouled and had the Lady Lions in the bonus.

“Something we’ve been preaching is the importance of getting to the bonus first,” Fite said. “We were able to do that and knocked (free throws) down when it counted.” Frye had made two free throws to tie the score at the end of the third and then added two more with 4:06 left to make the score 40-34. From there, the freshman guard remained perfect and went 8-for-8 during the final 55 seconds of play to help close out the win.

BROOKSVILLE | When Bracken County was in the process of running out to an 18-point lead at halftime of the 39th District tournament final against Mason County, Lady Bears coach Patrick Kelsch figured that was probably too good to last. And it was. But Kelsch also knew that his young team is tournament-tested from last year, and the Lady Bears, minus their biggest star in Sara Sticklen but with a budding standout player in eighth-grader Bailey Cummins, got it done at the end. Cummins’ 21 points led all scorers as Bracken defended its district title from last season with a 58-55 victory in the Igloo on Thursday night. Mallory Bell scored 11 points, all in the first half, for the Lady Bears (17-10). Alivia Bierley totaled 20 to lead Mason (8-22), and McKenzie Butler scored 15, 13 of them after halftime.

DEMING’S FIRST DISTRICT TITLE IN 32 YEARS

CHUCK HAMILTON

CARLISLE | The folks in Robertson County may still be celebrating after cheering on their beloved Deming Lady Devils as they held off Harrison County 49-47 to win the 38th District championship game on Thursday evening at Nicholas County High School. The Lady Devils captured their first district title since 1980 with the victory, which certainly didn’t come easily in a physical, hard-fought game. Deming freshman guard Lacey Mitchell opened the game’s scoring with a 3-pointer but the Fillies responded with a 7-0 run on a 3 from senior guard Mariah Nichols, a layup from sophomore center Jordan Doram and a short jumper from Nichols.

The Lady Devils ended the quarter with an 8-2 run to take an 11-9 lead after senior forward Kelsey Carmack’s putback basket, giving Deming a lead it would surrender the rest of the game. Harrison County was able to tie the score at 40 with 5:42 to play in the game but the Lady Devils were able to withstand the Fillies rally. Braun’s 50-game suspension overturned

NL MVP FIRST TO WIN
DRUG-RELATED PENALTY
IN GRIEVANCE

RONALD BLUM
Associated Press

NEW YORK | National League MVP Ryan Braun’s 50-game suspension was overturned Thursday by baseball arbitrator Shyam Das, the first time a baseball player successfully challenged a drug-related penalty in a grievance. The decision was announced Thursday by the Major League Baseball Players Association, one day before the 28-year-old outfielder was due to report to spring training with the Milwaukee Brewers. Braun tested positive in October for elevated testosterone, and ESPN revealed the positive test in December. “I am very pleased and relieved by today’s decision,” Braun said in a statement. “It is the first step in restoring my good name and reputation. We were able to get through this because I am innocent and the truth is on our side. “We provided complete cooperation throughout, despite the highly unusual circumstances. I have been an open book, willing to share details from every aspect of my life as part of this investigation, because I have nothing to hide. I have passed over 25 drug tests in my career, including at least three in the past year.” No reasoning was given for Thursday’s decision. “Today the arbitration panel announced its decision, by a 2-1 vote, to sustain Ryan Braun’s grievance challenging his 50-game suspension by the commissioner’s office,” a statement from the players’ association said. MLB executive vice president Rob Manfred and union head Michael Weiner are part of the arbitration panel, and management and the union almost always split their votes, leaving Das, the independent panel member, to make the decision. Manfred said management disagreed with the decision by Das. It is the first time a drug suspension has been overturned in a grievance, baseball officials said.

“It has always been Major League Baseball’s position that no matter who tests positive, we will exhaust all avenues in pursuit of the appropriate discipline. We have been true to that position in every instance, because baseball fans deserve nothing less,” Manfred said. “As a part of our drug testing program, the commissioner’s office and the players’ association agreed to a neutral third party review for instances that are under dispute. While we have always respected that process, Major League Baseball vehemently disagrees with the decision rendered today by arbitrator Shyam Das.” Braun hit .312 with 33 homers and 111 RBIs last year and led Milwaukee to the NL championship series, where the Brewers lost to the eventual World Series champion St. Louis Cardinals. The Brewers are counting on his offense following the departure of Prince Fielder, who became a free agent and signed with the Detroit Tigers. Braun already was signed through 2015 when the Brewers gave him a new deal running through 2020 that added $105 million and guaranteed him a total of $145.5 million over a decade.

beginning the frame with a 9-2 run. The run was capped off by a putback basket from junior center Krista Smithers, who finished with a game-high 19 points, including 9-for-13 from the floor. Deming coach Thomas Mitchell, who was busy receiving congratulations and hugs from the Red and Black faithful after the game, lauded the play of Smithers. “Krista made so many key plays with her offensive rebounds and defensive rebounds and she really helped out Lacey, Jessica and Kelsey tonight,” said an elated coach. “We took some hard hits tonight but the girls have begun to gel so well together. I told them during one timeout that Harrison had thrown everything at you but if we believe we can do it, then we can do it.”

After Fillies senior guard Emalee Little’s short jumper tied the game, Smithers scored to give Deming a 42-40 lead with 5:06 left. Harrison tied the score on a putback basket from Doram before Deming freshman Samantha Woerner banked in her only bucket of the game with 4:22 to play to give the Lady Devils a 44-42 lead. The Lady Devils increased the lead to four on a pair of clutch free throws from Lacey Mitchell at the 2:43 mark and after the Fillies committed a turnover, Mitchell was fouled hard with 46 seconds left. She made one of two from the stripe and Harrison senior guard Kelsey Cummins cut the deficit to three with a basket before Smithers came through again, scoring with 25 seconds to play and giving the Lady Devils a five-point advantage. Nichols made her fourth 3-pointer of the game with three seconds to play for the final margin.

Lacey Mitchell finished with 12 points, her sister Jessica pitched in nine and Carmack added seven for Deming, which improved to 9-19. The Fillies (10-21) were led by Ingram and Nichols, who scored 16 and 13 points, respectively. Mitchell was appreciative of the enthusiastic support from the Deming fans, who easily outnumbered the Harrison fans. “I know there’s not a soul left in Robertson County,” he said. “From the great student section we had here tonight to all the adults who acted like students, the support we get from the community is fantastic.”

“I wish we would’ve made some more free throws and made it a little easier for us, but give Augusta the credit – they shot the lights out.” Both teams had opportunities to seal the game throughout the fourth quarter. Mason County was plagued with turnovers in the final four minutes of the game and Augusta struggled from the free-throw line late. With just over two minutes remaining, Mason’s Tyler Black scored off a steal to give the Royals a 4-point lead. Augusta failed to respond on the ensuing possession and the Royals gave up their 12th turnover and fouled Halawani who converted a 3-point play to set the score at 72-71. The Royals missed three free throw attempts in the bonus in the final 1:44 of play and Augusta missed a pair of attempts to set the final score. The Royals were 6-of-14 from the line and led by no more than eight throughout the game. Augusta was 17-of-30 from the stripe but was out-rebounded 44-37. “Defensively, we were disappointed,” O’Hearn said. “We just didn’t do a good job of containing them. “Augusta played fantastic and I’m proud of our kids for coming up with that defensive stand there at the end.” The Royals were led by Black’s 25 points and 10 boards. Tanner Walton scored 13 points off the bench. Shawn Johnson added 12 points and a team-high 11 rebounds. For Augusta, Dalton Appleman and Corey Moore added 16 and 14 points respectively. Tanner Kelsch

FLEMING

Overcoming a deficit of 18 points in the first quarter and then 11 at halftime to a team that had swept the season series did not phase Fleming County. In fact, they almost seemed to have planned for it to happen. “Before we left to come here tonight, we watched a film about a team that was down by 30 and came back and won,” Alex said. “Plus, we always play better in the second half against them.”

Just as if it were according to their master plan, the Lady Panthers closed the margin to 36-32 with 1:36 to play in the third quarter, before settling for a five-point deficit at the end of the period. Morgan Jett trimmed the lead to two points after scoring off an offensive rebound with 5:09 to play in the final quarter, but it was an Alex 3-pointer from the left-hand side off a Mandy Boyd pass with 1:55 remaining that sealed the deal. At least in Alex’s mind. “After I hit that 3-pointer, we knew we were going to win,” she said distinguishing between the team’s halftime belief and its eventual assurance of the final result. Rowan County retook the lead on the next trip down the floor, when Kathryn Duff made a short jumper in the lane, but the victory seemed destined when Jett nailed a 3-pointer from the right baseline 23 seconds later. Boyd sealed the deal with 20.9 seconds to play by sinking both ends of a 1-plus-1. The Lady Vikings were only able to convert one basket in the final minute, which came with 2.7 seconds to play.

Rowan County fouled Jett immediately and then called a time out, but during the break the bench was hit with a technical foul. After Alex missed both of her free throws, Jett nailed her two, and when the Lady Panthers successfully inbounded the ball, the Fleming County faithful erupted. Both Rowan County and Fleming County will compete in next week’s 16th Region Tournament. The draw will be held on Saturday and play will begin on Monday. Fleas that were no problem in the cold of winter, will rear their biting little heads again with Spring. It's important to treat your dog with flea prevention when Spring starts. ADVICE

Resentful husband’s lies have broken marriage beyond repair

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to “Roman” for 13 years. He has always been a man of few words who didn’t initiate much on his own, so I stepped up to bat and did everything. I took over all aspects of our married life — from bill paying to home maintenance to romance. He would tell me how grateful he was to me for doing it.

His adult daughters from a previous marriage have always been cold to me, and I recently found out why. It turns out Roman made up horrible, untrue stories behind my back. He painted himself as the victim of abuse! His daughters staged an “intervention” to save their dad, and Roman went along with them. He cleared out our bank accounts, hid money and assets and filed for divorce. I was stunned.

Abby, he went along with the charade for a week — until his guilt got the better of him, and he admitted he had made it all up. He claims he doesn’t want to divorce me after all. He said he made up the stories to get his daughters’ attention.

Roman and I are now going through counseling, and I am assuming responsibility for my part in this mess. He harbors strong resentment toward me and resorted to passive-aggressive revenge. We’re both doing our best to establish forthright, honest and open lines of communication.

The problem is his daughters still believe the lies. They hate me and won’t speak to their father unless he divorces me. I’m not sure what to do. Roman has lost his family and he may lose me, too. The damage is so widespread I don’t know what can be regained. Have you any advice for me? — OLDER, WISER AND HEART-BROKEN

DEAR OLDER, WISER AND HEARTBROKEN: Your letter made me furious. It proves that with your husband no good deed goes unpunished. Had you not taken on the functions your husband avoided, your credit would be shot, your house would be a wreck and your sex life nonexistent. And for this your husband slandered you?

That he would lie to his daughters about you is disgusting. That he then made a money grab and hid assets is appalling. What have you to gain from continuing this marriage? If I were you, I’d contact a divorce lawyer AND a forensic accountant, divide the assets and let the daughters take care of their ingrate of a father.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I belong to a supper club comprised of four couples. We have enjoyed our monthly gatherings for years and have developed a strong bond with each couple. As a host, each one takes turns hosting the event in their home. The recent behavior of one hostess has us baffled.

For starters, “Lynn” sometimes seats herself and her husband at a separate table, even though there’s room at the main table. She also involves herself with activities I consider rude — taking calls on her cell, perusing Facebook, doing paperwork. It’s beginning to feel as though we are an obligation rather than wanted guests.

Members of our group have been hesitant to discuss this with her because we don’t want to create tension in the group we have come to hold dear. Any suggestions? — GETTING SERVED A COLD DISH

DEAR GETTING SERVED: It appears there is already tension in the group you have come to hold dear. For a host to behave the way Lynn has is rude. Whoever in the group is closest to Lynn should have a chat with her about it — preferably face-to-face — and ask her to explain. It’s possible that the responsibility of hosting has become too much for her.

Museum Advocacy Day is Feb. 27

Museum Advocacy Day 2012 is Feb. 27, 2012, and hundreds of museum professionals will descend on Washington D.C. to meet with elected officials. They will give them the facts on the significant impact museums have on local economies, education and value of history organizations.

These days, museums are serving what is perhaps an unexpected function for U.S. communities, but a role our institutions have served for decades: as economic engines, creating jobs and generating business for companies large and small, but particularly small, in communities everywhere.

In direct expenditures alone, museums annually inject more than $200 billion into the U.S. economy. America’s estimated 17,500 museums employ more than 400,000 individuals. And perhaps most compelling in these times of tightening local budgets and the slash and burn approach to budgeting at the federal level was a recent U.S. Council of Mayors study that found that, for every $1 invested in cultural institutions [including museums], municipalities saw $7 in tax revenues come into their coffers. That’s a rate of return that would make even Warren Buffett swoon.

And that astounding return is due to the thriving cultural tourism industry in our country. According to the U.S. Department of Commerce, cultural tourism accounts for $192 billion in economic activity annually. And many of those monies are spent with the local eateries, the local bed and breakfast, or the local gift shops in communities across the country. Museums have long been cultural destinations in and of themselves. Trips including cultural and heritage activities comprise one of the most popular and significant segments of the travel industry, accounting for 23 percent of domestic trips. And clearly those trips generate economic activity for local businesses. Visitors to historic sites and cultural attractions, including museums, stay 53 percent longer and spend 36 percent more money than other kinds of tourists.

How do museums generate such economic benefits? The enduring popularity of museums is a major factor. Right here in the Ohio Valley, one need look no further than the Kentucky Gateway Museum Center to see the impact our museums have on our economy. In 2011 the Kentucky Gateway Museum Center hosted more than 10,000 visitors from 46 states and 4 countries. 792 research visitors from 28 states and abroad used our Research Library and over 2,000 attended the museum sponsored two day Oktoberfest in downtown Maysville. Many of these guests stayed in our motels, ate in our restaurants and shopped in our stores.

Nationwide, there are an estimated 850 million museum visits each year — that’s more than attendance at all professional sporting events and theme parks combined. America’s museums are economic sparks, pillars of our education system and major contributors to the overall quality of life in America. That message will be conveyed to our elected leaders on Capitol Hill on Feb. 28, when more than 300 museum professionals from around the country journey to Washington to make their case to Congress. If you value our local museums, we urge you to join us by contacting your elected officials, at all levels of government.

Museums are vital to our communities and their economies. Help us keep our museums and our communities string by lending your voice to ours, ensuring that the cause of museums is heard on Feb. 28.

Fathead Davis performs at Ohio Valley Manor

Parkview Dining Room was filled with the lyrics of love songs on Feb. 14, 2012, as Fathead Davis performed in celebration of Valentine’s Day. With Fathead’s electric piano and infectious smile joy spread throughout the room.

“The residents enjoyed Fathead’s performance, it was a great Valentine’s Day” said Pam Sauer, OVM Activities Director. “Fathead provided great entertainment for our residents, and I received a lot of positive compliments about Fathead Davis’s music from the staff, residents and visitors.”

Fathead can perform a variety of music ranging from rhythm, blues, soul and jazz to the love songs he performed at OVM.

“I had a wonderful time performing at OVM,” said Fathead.

OVM’s Activities Department works hard to bring in additional entertainment and to keep plenty of activities at OVM. The Activities Department staff would like to thank Fathead for performing at OVM and looks forward to future performances.

NEW ORLEANS

Costumes, beads give way to ashes

BILL HABER, ASSOCIATED PRESS

A member of Pete Fountain's Half Fast Marching Club hands out beads as the club begins its traditional parade through the streets of New Orleans, Tuesday, Feb. 21. This is the last day of the Mardi Gras celebration ending at midnight, after a day long celebration of parades, marching groups and people in costumes.

MARY FOSTER AND STACEY PLAISANCE
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS | Officers on horseback cleared Bourbon Street early Wednesday, declaring an end to Carnival 2012 in New Orleans as Mardi Gras revelers began to prepare for the beginning of Lent, the period of fasting and repentance before Easter.

Streams of people poured into the French Quarter as the sun began to set Tuesday to continue the party that began earlier along the city's traditional Garden District family-friendly parade route which follows stately St. Charles Avenue.

Bathed in springlike warmth and showered with trinkets, beads and music, New Orleans reveled in the excesses of Fat Tuesday. The drinking was in full swing shortly after dawn, and with it came outrageous costumes and flesh-flashing that drew thousands to the Quarter.

New Orleans police said late Tuesday they were investigating a stabbing on Esplanade Avenue but had few details. In a second incident, two people were shot in the leg and two suspects were taken in custody, police said.

Tom White, 46, clad in a pink tutu, bicycled with his wife, Allison, to the French Quarter. "I'm the pink fairy this year," he said. "Costuming is the real fun of Mardi Gras. I'm not too creative but when you weigh 200 pounds and put on a tutu people still take your picture."

His wife was not in costume. "He's disgraced the family enough," she said.

Brittany Davies struggled with her friends through the morning, feeling the effects of heavy drinking from the night before.

"They're torturing me," the Denver woman joked. "But I'll be OK after a bloody mary."

Indeed, the theme of the day was party hard and often.

Wearing a bright orange wig, a purple mask and green shoes, New Orleans resident Charlotte Hamrick walked along Canal Street to meet friends.

"I'll be in the French Quarter all day," Hamrick said. "I don't even go to the parades. I love to take pictures of all the costumes and just be with my friends. It's so fun."

Across the globe, people dressed up in elaborate costumes and partied the day away. In Rio de Janeiro, an estimated 850,000 tourists joined the city's massive five-day blowout. Meanwhile, the Portuguese, who have suffered deeply in Europe's debt crisis, defied a government appeal to keep working.

In the Cajun country of southwest Louisiana, masked riders went from town to town, making merry along the way in the Courir du Mardi Gras. And parades were held elsewhere around Louisiana and on the Gulf coasts of Mississippi and Alabama.

The celebration arrived in Louisiana in 1682 when the explorer LaSalle and his party stopped at a place they called Bayou Mardi Gras south of New Orleans to celebrate.

The predominantly African-American Zulu krewe was the first major parade to hit New Orleans' streets, shortly after 8 a.m. Tuesday. Most krewe members were in the traditional black-face makeup and Afro wigs Zulu riders have sported for decades. They handed out the organization's coveted decorated coconuts and other sought-after trinkets.

Italian winter fashion opts for dark

DANIELA PETROFF
Associated Press

MILAN | After several weeks of snow and subfreezing temperatures in Italy, the chill is out of the air — at least weather-wise — and Italian designers are looking at the bright side of things as they begin the latest round of preview showings for fall-winter 2012-2013.

The tightly-packed fashion week calendar boasts 70 shows and as many events, including showroom presentations, store openings and "aperitivi," the Italian version of a cocktail party. All the top billed names were scheduled to introduce their winter collections, from Armani to Fendi, from Gucci, Prada and Versace.

The Italian Fashion Chamber has set up a press center in the shadow of the Duomo, or cathedral, in downtown to Milan to accommodate some expected 15,000 fashionistas in town for the shows and has mounted a show tent in front of one of Milan's favorite monuments, the Sforzesco Castle, where several of the shows will be held.

"We're hoping for a triple-A season, with no downgrading," said Mario Boselli, president of the fashion chamber said at a press conference ahead of the shows in a quip reflecting Italy's downgrading by ratings agencies as the nation struggles to avoid financial disaster.

The designing duo Dolce&Gabbana, who never miss an opportunity to celebrate, are throwing a mega party over the weekend. On Friday, Vogue America's Anna Wintour and Miuccia Prada will co-host a preview presentation of the exhibit entitled "Elsa Schiaparelli and Miuccia Prada: On Fashion" to open at the Metropolitan Museum's Costume Institute in New York in May.

On Wednesday the first day of the 7-day preview showings, both Gucci and Ferretti presented a woman who keeps her feet firmly on the ground while letting her feminine fantasy fly.

Pepsi's mid-calorie soda aims to win back drinkers

WITH 60 CALORIES 'PEPSI NEXT' TRIES TO LURE THOSE WHO DON'T LIKE DIET OR REGULAR SODA

CANDICE CHOI
Associated Press

NEW YORK | Pepsi is hoping to win back soda drinkers with a compromise.

Some people don't like the calories in regular soda, but loathe the taste of zero-calorie diet drinks. So the nation's No. 2 cola company is rolling out "Pepsi Next," a cola that has about half the calories of regular Pepsi at 60 calories per can.

The cola, which is slated to hit store shelves nationally by the end of March, is Pepsi's biggest product launch in years. The drink comes as people increasingly move away from sugary drinks to water and other lower-calorie beverages because of health concerns. It's also an attempt by Pepsi to revive the cola wars against Coke and others.

Pepsi Next isn't the first drink to try to hit the sweet spot between diet and regular cola. Dr Pepper Snapple rolled out its low-calorie Dr Pepper Ten, which has 10 calories. The company said the drink, which has sugar unlike its diet soda, helped boost its fourth-quarter sales.

But coming up with a successful "mid-calorie soda," which has more calories, has been more challenging for beverage makers. In 2001, Coke rolled out "C2" and Pepsi in 2004 introduced its "Pepsi Edge," both of which had about half the calories of regular soda. Both products also were taken off the market by 2006 because of poor sales.

"The problem was that consumers either wanted regular soda or a diet drink with zero calories — not something in between," said John Sicher, editor and publisher of Beverage Digest.

Pepsi says its latest stab at an in-between soda uses a different formula to more closely imitate the taste of regular soda. Pepsi Next is made with a mix of three artificial sweeteners and high fructose corn syrup.

A Pepsi spokeswoman, Melisa Tezanos, said the company developed the cola by researching the "taste curve" that consumers experience when drinking regular soda. She compared that arc to how someone might evaluate a sip of wine, from the moment the liquid hits the tongue to the aftertaste it leaves.

PEPSI

FROM B1

“We wanted to develop a taste curve that gives the full flavor of regular Pepsi,” Tezanos said.

Pepsi Next also follows the company’s lower-calorie variations of its other drinks. Gatorade, a unit of Pepsi, has “G2,” which at 20 calories has a little less than half the calories of the original version. And the company’s Tropicana unit introduced “Trop50,” which is half of the 110 calories in a regular 8-ounce glass of orange juice.

But orange juice and sports drinks have nutritional benefits that a drink maker can market. A mid-calorie soda is a tougher sell because it provides only empty calories. So health-conscious drinkers usually opt for diet soda or quit soda altogether.

Sales in the $74 billion soft drink industry have been fizzling out, with volume falling steadily since 2005, according to Beverage Digest, which tracks the industry. Meanwhile, healthier drinks are growing more popular, with bottled water accounting for 11 percent of all beverages consumed in 2010, up from 2 percent in 2000. Consumption of sports drink rose to 2.3 percent, from 1.2 percent.

Diet soda also rose to 29.9 percent of the carbonated drink market in 2010, up from 24.7 percent a decade earlier. To keep up with changing tastes, Coke and Pepsi have introduced newer versions of their diet drinks — Coke Zero and Pepsi Max — that promise a taste that’s more like their regular sodas.

Pepsi hopes Pepsi Next will help it gain back the market share it’s lost in recent years. The company’s namesake drink had its share in the carbonated soft drink market fall to 9.5

percent in 2010, from 13.6 percent a decade earlier, while Diet Pepsi’s share remained steady at 5.3 percent.

Coke is still the top selling brand, with 17 percent market share. Diet Coke follows with 9.9 percent.

PepsiCo Inc., based in Purchase, N.Y., said earlier this month that it plans to increase marketing for its brands by $500 million to $600 million this year. A centerpiece of that will be the company’s first global ad campaign this summer, a peak time for the soda market.

GUCCI

The latest Gucci woman is an enigma. In the same wisp of a body she combines rigor and romance to create a sense of demure discipline.

One thing is sure — the lady is dark, as underlined by the chiaroscuro lighting effects at the Wednesday afternoon show which opened Milan fashion week for fall-winter 2012-1213.

“This is a modern-day romanticism, a dramatic sensuality, a dark glamour, with subtle games of provocative intellect,” is how creative director Frida Giannini defined her latest collection in the show notes.

Throughout the collection Gucci mixes pieces with military accents with ultra feminine styles complete with sequins and slits.

The basic silhouette has a tiny waist and straight skirt with uneven hemline, long in the back, shorter in the front with subtle draping.

On a strictly dark background, Gucci brightens up the look with tapestry textiles, floral prints and embroidery. Velvet and silk or brocades and leather combine to create an extra opulent effect, not to mention the over the top-feathered creations.

Military attire is relegated to the officers club. Crocodile riding boots and oversized coats combine with demure velvet skirts and embroidered see-through equestrian pants.

Night is dreamy and feminine with long dresses in wrinkled tulle or velvet, embroidered with hand-sewn floral patterns.

The new stirrup bag, roomy as well as classy, has a revisited metallic spur closure. Gucci offers a more structured version of the saddle bag for evening in de rigueur black crocodile. Footwear is either flat and masculine or slipper-like with a sharp high heel.

The look is definitely all about feminine chic — starting with the models, who with their demurely pulled back hair, parted in the middle looked like a parade of Audrey Hepburn clones. The runway sound track from “Breakfast at Tiffany’s” left no room for doubt.

The fall-winter 2012-2013 collection presented Wednesday afternoon by designer Alberta Ferretti was a closet full of 1960’s favorites from the little cocktail dress to the belted coat dress, to the first pant suits with tapered jacket and wide pants.

Ferretti also brought back the classic pump as a fashion must and the crisp clutch brief case so popular in the early 1960’s.

Along with staple black, the Ferretti palette included lipstick red and a yesteryear favorite, purple.

But if the look was prim and proper by day, by night it transformed into contemporary glam, in classic styles, fashioned out of sheer chiffon with enticing slits, ruffles and strategically placed embroidery.

ASHES

FROM B1

In the oak-lined Garden District, clarinetist Pete Fountain led his Half-Fast Walking Club on its annual march to the French Quarter.

Fountain, 82, gave a thumbs-up to start off and his band launched into “When The Saints Go Marching In” as they rounded the corner onto St. Charles Avenue shortly after 7 a.m. It was the 52nd time that Fountain’s group has paraded for Mardi Gras. This year, the group wore bright yellow suits and matching pork pie hats for its theme, “Follow the Yellow Brick Road.”

Costumes were the order of the day, ranging from the predictable to the bizarre.

Wearing a purple wig, New Orleans resident Juli Shipley carried a gallon of booze down Bourbon Street and filled her friends’ cups when they got low.

“We’re going to wander all day and people-watch,” Shipley said. “That’s the best part of Mardi Gras — the costumes. They’re amazing.”

Partygoers were dressed as Wizard of Oz characters Dorothy and the Wicked Witch, bags of popcorn, pirates, super heroes, clowns, jesters, princesses and lots of homemade costumes with the traditional Mardi Gras colors of purple, green and gold.

Rain stayed away and temperatures were in the 70s. As the day wore on and drinking intensified, the combination encouraged raunchy acts in the French Quarter, where women bared flesh in pleadings for beads tossed to the street by revelers on balconies.

By midafternoon, some folks were tucked out.

Alison Scott, 35, of New Orleans, was part of a group that had a small city of tents and canopies set up at Lee Circle. She and her family had been coming to the spot for about 40 years. “Believe me, I’m always glad to get here and then I’m always glad to go home,” she said.

Her 6-year-old daughter, Shannon, was asleep nearby under a blanket of beads.

“She just pooped out. This is the first time she’s stopped. She’s been so excited all day,” Scott said.

THE (TIFFIN) ADVERTISER-TRIBUNE, ON MANAGING THE LIST OF OHIO HIGHWAY AND BRIDGE PROJECTS

A priority list of highway and bridge projects in Ohio, with some scheduled to be delayed for decades because of funding constraints, raised hackles among officials in several areas of the state. Now, the state Department of Transportation says it will take another look at the list.

The order of projects on the schedule may be changed, moving some up and some down on the list.

ODOT Director Jerry Wray said new criteria will be added to how priorities are set for the projects. One new criteria will be public safety, he noted.

That ought to upset residents of the Buckeye State. Who decided the first round of evaluations would not include public safety? That should have been at the very top of the list of criteria, or near it.

Clearly, if safety was not on the list, the initial round of scheduling was flawed. It should be reviewed and amended.

Politics can never be entirely divorced from the process of doling out taxpayers' money. But Ohio residents are not served by a system under which considerations such as public safety and economic development are minor players in setting priorities.

AKRON BEACON JOURNAL, ON A NEW DAY OF COOPERATION BETWEEN OHIO'S PUBLIC COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Collaboration often is easier to talk about than to achieve. Challenged by John Kasich, Ohio's public colleges and universities have shown they are up to it. In the process, they have done much to advance the idea of the institutions as a functioning system of higher education.

The governor gave the 37 schools a tight time frame to submit a single capital-funding request that captured their priorities within the reality of the state's strained resources. On Wednesday, the Higher Education Capital Funding Collaborative, led by Ohio State President E. Gordon Gee, delivered a unified funding proposal, stressing its system-wide, strategic approach.

Until now, universities and colleges have engaged in an each-for-itself fight for state funds, the chances of funding determined by formulas and by lobbying clout at the Statehouse.

The $350 million request submitted this week represents a radical shift, featuring a more prominent place for the interests of the state as a whole. Together, the schools have clarified principles and guidelines for funding, while addressing key structural and workforce priorities without short-changing individual institutions. ...

The governor has applauded the proposal as unprecedented — and for good reason. Faced with a tight budget, he has provided the essential leadership, pounding home the message of "cultural change" in how state operations are conducted.

So who's weak?" — Meg Stapleton, a former spokeswoman for Sarah Palin, telling reporters that the upcoming HBO movie "Game Change," about the former vice presidential candidate, is "sick" and inaccurate. Unbridled learning will move Kentucky forward

TERRY HOLLIDAY

I invite readers to visit the Unbridled Learning section on the Kentucky Department of Education's website at <http://www.education.ky.gov> to get more details on the new accountability model, academic standards and more.

Kentucky's selection as one of 11 states to receive flexibility under the federal No Child Left Behind Act reinforces the commonwealth's position as a leader in innovative P-12 education efforts.

NCLB was implemented more than 10 years ago, and it had the right vision. It forced us to raise achievement and expectations for all children. However, it also allowed states to lower standards in order to meet the proficiency requirements, labeled schools making progress as "failing" and in the process, has let down many of the children it was originally designed to help.

NCLB's all-or-nothing approach did not provide an accurate or reliable picture of what is happening in our schools. But, with the flexibility Kentucky received, we can replace this approach with one that is more rigorous and balanced.

Kentucky's Unbridled Learning: College/Career Ready for All assessment and accountability system was developed with significant input from educators and partners and emphasizes college/career readiness — a key measure of 2009's Senate Bill 1. This forward-thinking legislation, which passed unanimously, gave our state a leg up in the waiver process.

The Unbridled Learning accountability system, approved by the Kentucky Board of Education, is designed to be a broader, more reasonable and balanced system of accountability than NCLB. It uses the rigorous Kentucky Core Academic Standards as its foundation and focuses not only on student achievement toward proficiency in basic skills, but also on student academic growth. It fosters the closing of achievement gaps; requires improvements in college/career-readiness rates; and encourages higher graduation rates.

The Kentucky Performance Rating for Educational Progress tests for students, which are part of the Unbridled Learning system, will show how well schools are moving all students toward proficiency — not only in reading and mathematics, but in subjects like social studies, science and writing. Program Reviews in arts and humanities and practical living/career studies will provide information about the strength of and access to those programs. End-of-course exams at high school will give students a stake in their schools' performance.

The new accountability model doesn't ignore the issue of persistently low-achieving schools, but will give us a more in-depth look at how those schools are performing and where they need to improve. It will provide the support and assistance required for better teaching and learning. And by recognizing school and district progress, it inspires true success.

The flexibility under NCLB means that there no longer will be two measures of accountability for Kentucky's public schools, as had been the case. The Unbridled Learning system will meet the needs of both state and federal requirements, leading to less confusion for parents and citizens.

Each year, an overall score on a scale of 0 to 100 will be provided for each school and district, allowing parents, educators and communities to easily see how well their local schools are doing. Behind that overall score will be in-depth data that provide specific details about performance, preparation and work to reach annual goals.

Simply put, Kentucky's Unbridled Learning accountability system provides what it takes to bring about meaningful change that will benefit all Kentucky students.

We are asking for parents, communities, business leaders and elected officials to continue to support their schools and educators as they implement this more-rigorous system. This work benefits every resident of the commonwealth, because the ultimate goal of college and career readiness for our students will translate into better employment opportunities for them and an improved economy for Kentucky.

Kentucky's proud and recognized tradition of education reform is based on our ability to come together, cooperate and collaborate for the good of our students, our schools and our state. If we are to have the education system our children deserve, it's more important now than ever before that we keep that tradition alive.

I invite readers to visit the Unbridled Learning section on the Kentucky Department of Education's website at <http://www.education.ky.gov> to get more details on the new accountability model, academic standards and more.

POLITICAL COMMENTARY

New Obama campaign co-chair: President is wrong

AMY GOODMAN

Feingold opposed Obama's Wall Street reform bill, saying it was too weak, and supported the state attorneys general, like New York's Eric Schneiderman and another of the new campaign co-chairs, California's Kamala Harris, who, at first, opposed the proposed settlement with the five largest banks over allegations of mortgage-service fraud and "robo-signing."

"The president is wrong." So says one of the newly appointed co-chairs of President Barack Obama's re-election campaign.

Those four words headline the website of the organization Progressives United, founded by former U.S. Sen., and now Obama campaign adviser, Russ Feingold. He is referring to Obama's recent announcement that he will accept super PAC funds for his re-election campaign. Feingold writes: "The President is wrong to embrace the corrupt corporate politics of Citizens United through the use of Super PACs — organizations that raise unlimited amounts of money from corporations and the richest individuals, sometimes in total secrecy. It's not just bad policy; it's also dumb strategy." And, he says, it's "dancing with the devil."

In 1905, President Theodore Roosevelt said to Congress, "All contributions by corporations to any political committee or for any political purpose should be forbidden by law." He signed a bill into law banning such contributions in 1907. In 2012, this hundred-year history of campaign-finance controls died, thanks to five U.S. Supreme Court justices who decided, in the 2010 Citizens United case, that corporations can use their money to express free speech, most notably in their efforts to influence federal elections.

After 18 years representing Wisconsin in the U.S. Senate, Feingold lost his re-election to self-funded Republican multimillionaire and tea-party favorite Ron Johnson.

Since then, Feingold has been teaching law, started Progressives United and, while supporting the effort to recall Wisconsin's embattled Gov. Scott Walker, has steadfastly refused to run against him or for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring Democratic Sen. Herb Kohl.

Feingold was the sole member of the U.S. Senate to vote against the USA Patriot Act. He was a fierce critic of the Bush administration's warrantless wiretapping program. Although Obama, as a senator, originally threatened to filibuster any legislation that would grant retroactive immunity to the telecom corporations involved with the wiretapping, he reversed himself on the eve of the Democratic Convention in 2008 and voted for the bill. Feingold remained adamantly opposed. On the war in Afghanistan, Feingold told me: "I was the first member of the Senate to call for a timeline to get us out of Afghanistan. Even before Obama was elected, when it was between [John] McCain and Obama, I said, 'Why are we talking about a surge?' ... Sending our troops over there, spending billions and billions of dollars in Afghanistan makes no sense. And I think it was a mistake for the president to do the surge, and I think he's beginning to realize we need to get out of there."

Feingold opposed Obama's Wall Street reform bill, saying it was too weak, and supported the state attorneys general, like New York's Eric Schneiderman and another of the new campaign co-chairs, California's Kamala Harris, who, at first, opposed the proposed settlement with the five largest banks over allegations of mortgage-service fraud and "robo-signing." Feingold's reaction to the $25 billion settlement that the White House pushed through? "We were among the few that refused to do a little dance after this announcement ... whenever it ends up being Wall Street, somehow there's always a clunker in there."

As I interviewed Feingold, just hours after he was named one of the 35 Obama campaign co-chairs, I asked him if he was an odd choice for the position. Feingold responded: "How about a co-chair that's proud of him for bringing us health care for the first time in 70 years? How about a co-chair who thinks that he has actually done a good thing with the economy and helped with the stimulus package, and we've had 22 months of positive job growth? How about a co-chair for a president that has the best reputation overseas of any president in memory, that has reversed the awful damage of the Bush administration, who in places like Cairo and in India and Indonesia has reached out to the rest of the world. Believe me, on balance, there's no question. And finally, how about a co-chair of a president who I believe will help us appoint justices who will overturn Citizens United?"

Until then, as the Obama campaign "dances with the devil" of super PACs, perhaps campaign co-chair Russ Feingold will help us follow the money.

BRIDGE by Steve Becker

You are South, and the bidding has gone:

South	North
1 ♠	2 ♠
2 ♥	3 ♣

What would you bid now with each of the following three hands?

- ♠ AKJ83 ♥ AJ74 ♦ Q96 ♣ 10
- ♠ KQ952 ♥ AK86 ♦ — ♣ QJ43
- ♠ AQ165 ♥ KQ942 ♦ J8 ♣ 4

1. Three diamonds. Your partner has made two forcing bids, so you should assume that he has not only the necessary values for game, but possibly also the values needed for a slam. Even though you have substantially more than your first two bids indicated — you have 15 high-card points and might have had only 12 — the best you can do at this point is to bid three diamonds. Three diamonds is forcing, because both you and partner have been bidding constructively all along, and the chief purpose of saying only three diamonds at this stage is to allow partner to reveal whether he has a game or a slam in mind. It would be wrong to bid three notrump instead, because that would indicate minimum values for your opening bid. It would also tend to describe 5-4-2-2 distribution rather than 5-4-3-1. Your next move will depend largely on what partner does over three diamonds. 2. Five clubs. A raise to four clubs would suggest that you had only a minimum opening bid and were responding to three clubs merely because partner had forced you to bid again. But you have much more than a minimum once partner mentions clubs, and you can best show this by leaping to five clubs. The jump-raise in this sequence guarantees four trumps and therefore a void in diamonds. After you jump to five clubs, the rest is up to partner. 3. Three hearts. Partner does not know you have five hearts, so you should rebid them to clarify the nature of your hand. You hope partner will either raise hearts or support spades belatedly, in which case you plan to settle for game in the suit of his choice. If partner next repeats one of his suits, you will show a preference for diamonds, raising four diamonds to five or bidding four diamonds over four clubs. Of course, if partner bids three notrump over three hearts, you will pass. Tomorrow: Steppingstone to success.

HOROSCOPE by Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)

This can be an explosive day for you, full of unpredictable events and arguments with powerful people. My advice is to tread carefully!

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)

Something hidden and unexpected will jump out of the closet today, as it were. This could be an upset with respect to shared property, debt, taxes and anything you own jointly with others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)

Yesterday's difficulties with authority figures could lead to big surprises today. Don't quit your day job. Do whatever you can to smooth troubled waters.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)

Travel plans likely will be canceled or interrupted today. Ditto for anything having to do with higher education, medicine, the law, publishing and the media. Expect a few surprises.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)

Check your bank account today. Double-check matters with inheritances, insurance and jointly held property. Something is unpredictable in these areas. (Gulp.)

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)

All situations with partners and close friends are subject to surprises, little rebellions and upsets. That's because power struggles can take place easily today. Take it easy.

Computer crashes, power outages, staff shortages and canceled appointments are par for the course at work today. Even news about your health could concern you. Go gently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

This is an accident-prone day for your children. Be extra vigilant. Give warnings to your kids about being careful — even if they are adults.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

Take precautions at home to avoid minor accidents. Small appliances might break down. Little breakages could occur. Do what you can to keep the peace where you live and also with family members.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)

This is an accident-prone day for your sign. The potential accidents (they are only potential) could be physical or verbal. Think before you speak or act.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)

Keep an eye on your money today, because you might find money or you might lose money. Ditto for your possessions. Guard against loss or theft.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20)

This is a very unpredictable day for you. Therefore, slow down and take it easy. Expect the unexpected — which, of course, is impossible to do.

YOU BORN TODAY

You're intelligent. In part, this is why you are not afraid to take risks. You believe in your problem-solving abilities. You care about others, but you're also very passionate about your work.
